

The Week in Business

Whatever increase in trading was noticeable last week in the textile, apparel and kindred industries was concentrated on goods for immediate use. As yet the deadlock on spring buying is unbroken, although some traders profess to see a weakening in the spring policies of retailers and are predicting an influx of spring orders during the week ending December 1. The movement of made-up merchandise was stimulated by special sales conducted by dry goods jobbing houses and manufacturers in nine important wholesale distributing centers last week. Reports from these sales indicated that the price level quoted in many of the spring orders was not so high as shown in the lists issued by leading mills, were attractive to retailers. Buying, although not of exceptionally large volume, was sufficient to move the stocks of jobbers in preparation for inventories at the end of the year. There is a disposition among all branches of the trade to work down the stock to the lowest possible point for the annual stock-taking, and to enter the new year with a minimum of merchandise, either in the raw or finished state, on hand. This is leading to the belief that trade will be more active immediately after the turn of the year, as inventories are expected to reveal some well depleted stockpiles.

The Smith carpet auction and the Samuel E. Eisman & Co. silk sale in New York attracted some attention and moved close to $5,000,000 worth of carpets and about $2,000,000 worth of silks into hands nearer the consuming public. More goods came into the realm of reduced prices. Leading factors in the percale, printed goods and denim trades made new prices that are believed to have established a definite basis for trading in these goods. At least they have every appearance of holding for a few months and will give merchants and stocks on hand a definite price idea with which to go ahead in making inventory or planning for the coming spring operations. The decline in carpet prices at the Smith auction, from the price level in October, averaged close to 20 per cent. A few manufacturers of men's clothing announced flat cuts of about 33-1/2 per cent on undelivered stocks of suits and overcoats. The termination of the price guaranty in the men's suit industry is expected to bring forth a new price level. A number of manufacturers of plans to move accumulated stocks now in the hands of the manufacturers. Throughout the textile and shoe trades there was an additional curtailment of production.

Cottons

The new low prices on percales, prints, shirt materials and denims were the high spots of the cotton goods trade last week. The cuts made by leading mill agencies averaged around 55 per cent in the percale, 40 per cent in the prints, and 30 per cent in the denims. Last April. The secondary market had already decided, but the mill prices established a still lower basis of trading.

Liquidation of high priced stocks in the hands of dry goods jobbers gained force through the special sales held in Boston, Atlanta, Chicago, Cincinnati, Minneapolis, Little Rock, Kansas City and St. Joseph. Indications point to widespread reductions in retail prices approximating those now well established in wholesale circles.

The unfinished goods division of the trade remained inactive during the week, with prices sagging still further. In the middle of the week 64-60 38-44 inch print cloths declined to 94 cents a yard, a full cent from the opening.

Silks

Liquidation of finished silk goods received impetus last week through the $2,000,000 offering of Samuel Eisman & Co. and the $1,000,000 offering of the E. J. Eisman Co. Both offerings were reported to have brought forth quantities at the sales, with the expectation of staging sales in their own stores in the near future. Competition among the retail dealers for new low levels in silks almost daily. Little is being done in the primary markets toward producing spring goods, although some manufacturers are preparing to launch new lines of goods which will be pushed when the trade shows some sign of working into the spring season.

The situation in woollens and worsteds remained unchanged compared to the week previous. The market was booked, and in the estimation of some trade leaders the spring selling season is almost completed. Clothing manufacturers are expected to determine the price level for the coming season before the first of the year and it is admitted that the garment manufacturers are awaiting an indication concerning the resumption of selling spring clothing before committing themselves to cloth deliveries. In some quarters of the market for spring wear, fabrics trade is progressing at a better pace. There is a steady call for some of the high priced specialty fabrics, but this comprises but a small portion of the trade as a whole.

Woolens

Determined efforts are being made to curtail the trapping of animal skins to this winter in order to keep down the supply of furs. How far this effort will succeed is an open question. The largest furriers in the country are understood to have sent discouraging letters to trappers, advising them that at present the fur prices are being paid for the new catch. Some collectors are offering no more than $1 a skin of muskrat. Last year the first of the season was selling at $3 to $4.

Plans are under way for conducting sales in this country early in the year. It is expected that a portion of the fur stock will be sold in the United States.
